EXPORT DUTIES AND COMMERCIAL

CHANGES IN JAPANA The movement for the abolition of expert. laties seems to be slowly but steadily gaining spinorters in the business world. Some time ago the Soinen Clab of Uwajima in the Profeeture of Ehime and the Chamber of Commerce at Gifu memorialized the Government, urging the vital importance of enabling January gods to leave the country duty free. Their example has been followed by a still more powerful and respectable; body in Tokyo, the Keishin Clais consisting of the most prominent business nen of the capital. The Keizai Zazshi. from which we derive the above information, is delighted with the zeal manifested name and surname shall be drawn up, and sent by men of business in furthering this cause. Dverything, it says, points to the possibility of Japan's becoming a great and wealth / country. and it is evidently her interest to remove all punishment as will root out the plague from obstacles now impeding the development of her commerce. Among such obstacles by no means the least important is the imposition of duties on exports. Our contemporary lame its to a indiff and from any cause create trouble, then the ference with which politicians regard this question, and deems it a misfortune that they are too busily occupied with party intrigues to care about the commercial interests of the country. This question of export duties has considerable nterest for the foreign merchants in the settlements. Not that the removal of the comparativev triffing box now lavied on exp rts could in itself materially influence the trade, but that the evident tendency of the proposed measure must be to divert business from the open ports. At present the chief staples of the export trad , tes and silk, necessarily come to the settlements, the tea to be re fired, and the silk to be inaported and shipped by merchants whose connections on the other side give them advantages against which the Japanese direct exporter cannot contend seconsafully. But with regard to ten, we elieve that in the future Yokohama is destined to lose its share of the trade, either Kobe or wagasaki becoming the great emporium for that branch of exports. Our reason for saving this s that foreign compatition, pressing more and to distribute the troops and at once proceed to more on Japan se years go by, will compel her at last to confine her eniture of the to the districts indicated by nature as best suited tion of the Government, when means of communication were very imperfect and faudal divisions were strongly marked, each fief naturally aimed at being as self-supplying as possible, and of course tea above all things was cultivated within the boundaries of every daimints. Little by little, however, the immense improvement of the Maiji era, not alone in respect of the making of roads and railways but also in unifying the empire, have caused economical considerations to be taken into larger account by tea-growers. with the result that the tea-plant is grajually disappearing from places not specially adapted to it by soil and climate. The process of change has not yet been carried very far, but it is distinctly visible, and competition from without must accelerate it rapidly. Nature has indicated Kinshu as the part of Japan presminently fitted for the culture of tes, and to Kiushu the industry will assuredly be confined in the end. That would of course entail the transfer of the export business in this staple to Kobs or Nagssuki. Yokohama, on the other hand, will remain the great

HANKOW.

17th October. All continues peaceful at our port, but a peace which requires the presence of four gunboats to maintain is not very satisfactory. W wonder anxiously and often when steps will be taken to raise the state of siege under which we live. The authorities are busy, both here and in the region round, in making considerable stir. but with results not at all proportioned to the efforts put forth. Six more rioters were seized at Wusich, and taken to the district magistrate, to be immediately liberated again. The half Hongkong. dozen Huangpi pawnbrokers have been carefully tried for their being in posse sion of the blocks of that abominable book Kwei Kiau-kai-ss, and widely circulating it. As was to be expacted, being all buttomed men, they were found not to blame; but the story that the party really guilty had died was too much for even our Vicercy to swallow, so a new trial is ordered. In the country districts the magistrates want to make a census of the native Christians in order to give them better protection, but the Christians are very dubious about giving more information than they can help They have no ambition to have their names registered in the gamen, and with good reason, for it means missief. A most important document has turned up entitled "The Hunga Agreement." It has been frequently rumoured that the Hunan diterati and gentry were holding meetings to plan our expulsion. Now they wish us to know the conclusions to which they have come, and publish the same in a broad-sheet the size of the Daily News. It consists of seven articles expressed in most pointed and businesslike language. They deal with the means by which shall be exterminated all local Christians, all travelling Christians, pro-Christian officials, foreigners who come to Hanan, and finally foreign devils generally. It tells us how the men and money shall be raised etc., and all with the gracious permission of the Emperor. The Kolao Hui is not "in it." It is satisfactory to learn_from Article VII. that. they are not to burn and destroy any more foreign property, but to confiscate it for the banefit of the funds. It would hardly be concluded from this that no province in the empire is so little able to defend itself from an enemy, let alone attacking as that inhabited by these fire-eaters. The tota military force of Hunan is 2,000 men nominally -actually perhaps balf of that. With regard to military as to all other matters they have boon anti-foreign. There is not a rifled firearm in the province, big or little. They still patronise, when at home, the ancient matchlooks and jingals with a few old percussion aunothbores. Their gaupowder is home-made, and for bullets they prefer inch-and-a-half lengths of nailred fron. Besides these, the local blacksmiths hammer them out knives, tridents,
